THE PORT PRODUCING REGION

The vines that produce Port are grown in the mountains inland from Porto, in a region called the Douro. The Douro is the oldest demarcated wine region in the world, a UNESCO world heritage site and the world's largest mountain wine region. It is one of the most challenging regions to grow grapes with its steep mountainous terrains meaning vines have to be grown on ancient stone terraces. These terraces make mechanization almost impossible so all our grapes are hand-picked. Summer temperatures above 40°C, incredibly low rainfall and well drained soils means port vines have some of the lowest yields in the world with highly concentrated fruit.

Port gets its name from Porto, a coastal city in the north of Portugal. Port has been shipped from here since the 16th century. Today Port is still aged and shipped from the city's historic Port lodges.

The Symingtons are a family of British and Portuguese origin who have lived and worked in Portugal since 1882. Today they are the world's leading producers of premium port. The business is currently run by the 4th and 5th generation. The family are the leading vineyard owners in the Douro valley, with 26 Quintas covering over 2,250 hectares of which over 1,000 are under vine.

Founded in 1820 by Scottish brother William & John Graham. Originally textile shippers, the brothers fell in love with port after accepting 27 pipes (casks) of the wine as payment of debt. In 1890 Graham's became one of the first port shippers to buy vineyards in the Douro- making the transition from trading the wines to producing them. In the same year, Graham's built their famous lodge in Porto- today it is still a working wine lodge and contains over 3,000 oak casks of port. In 1970 Graham's was acquired by the Symington family, whose expertise, investment & leadership has seen this historic port house develop into one of the world's leading premium port brands.
